Acknowledgments

History books, like the lives described in them, are shaped by the conditions in which they were written. Much of this work was written during a period of part-time academic employment between 1981 and 1986. Therefore, its completion owes special thanks to those who offered me a living and some support during those years, including Daniel Headrick, Barbara Sciacchitano, Richard Farrell, and Jon Sumida. Additional support was provided by the American Historical Association, which awarded me a Beveridge grant in 1985. Above all, I would like to thank the members of the Department of History at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, who, in welcoming me as a colleague, provided the support necessary for the completion of this project. I would especially like to acknowledge Benjamin Rader, the chairman of the Department of History; the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences; and the Research Council for two grants, one to buy a personal computer and the other to defray the costs of the mapwork. Thanks are also due to Les Howard for doing the maps.

The many others who provided help and support of different kinds through the course of this project include the librarians, archivists, and staff at the following institutions: the Regenstein Library at the University of Chicago; the Newberry Library; the state historical societies of Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, Ohio, Indiana, and New York; and the local historical societies or public libraries in St. Louis, Alton, Quincy, Hannibal, Keokuk, Davenport, Rock Island, Galena, and Dubuque. I owe special thanks to Kathleen Conzen, William McNeil, Michael Conzen, and Frank Smith for useful discussions of the material. I would also like to thank my brother Robert Mahoney for editorial assistance throughout.
