Realism is commonly portrayed as theory that reduces International Relations to pure power politics. Michael Williams provides an important re-examination of the Realist tradition and its relevance for contemporary International Relations. Examining three thinkers commonly invoked as Realism’s foremost proponents – Hobbes, Rousseau, and Morgenthau – the book shows that, far from advocating a crude realpolitik, Realism’s most famous classical proponents actually stressed the need for a restrained exercise of power and a politics with ethics at its core. These ideas are more relevant than ever at a time when the nature of responsible responses to international problems is at the centre of contemporary political debate. This original interpretation of major thinkers will interest scholars of International Relations and the history of ideas.

Michael C. Williams is Senior Lecturer in the Department of International Politics at the University of Wales, Aberystwyth. He has published widely in both International Relations theory and security studies, including articles in International Organization and International Studies Quarterly.
CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS: 100

The Realist Tradition and the Limits of International Relations

Editorial Board

Steve Smith (Managing editor)
Thomas Biersteker  Phil Cerny  Michael Cox
A. J. R. Groom  Richard Higgott  Kimberley Hutchings
Caroline Kennedy-Pipe  Steve Lamy  Michael Mastanduno
Louis Pauly  Ngaire Woods

Cambridge Studies in International Relations is a joint initiative of Cambridge University Press and the British International Studies Association (BISA). The series will include a wide range of material, from undergraduate textbooks and surveys to research-based monographs and collaborative volumes. The aim of the series is to publish the best new scholarship in International Studies from Europe, North America and the rest of the world.
CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

100 Michael C. Williams
   The Realist Tradition and the Limits of International Relations

99 Ivan Arreguín-Toft
   How the Weak Win Wars
   A Theory of Asymmetric Conflict

98 Michael Barnett and Raymond Duvall (eds.)
   Power in Global Governance

97 Yale H. Ferguson and Richard N. Mansbach
   Remapping Global Politics
   History’s revenge and future shock

96 Christian Reus-Smit (ed.)
   The Politics of International Law

95 Barry Buzan
   From International to World Society?
   English School Theory and the Social Structure of Globalisation

94 K. J. Holsti
   Taming the Sovereigns
   Institutional Change in International Politics

93 Bruce Cronin
   Institutions for the Common Good
   International Protection Regimes in International Society

92 Paul Keal
   European Conquest and the Rights of Indigenous Peoples
   The Moral Backwardness of International Society

91 Barry Buzan and Ole Wæver
   Regions and Powers
   The Structure of International Security

90 A. Claire Cutler
   Private Power and Global Authority
   Transnational Merchant Law in the Global Political Economy

89 Patrick M. Morgan
   Deterrence Now

Series list continued after index
The Realist Tradition
and the Limits of International Relations

Michael C. Williams
University of Wales, Aberystwyth
Contents

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Acknowledgements</th>
<th>page viii</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 Sceptical states: Hobbes</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Rousseau, Realism, and realpolitik</td>
<td>52</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3 Hans Morgenthau and the historical construction of Realism</td>
<td>82</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4 The tyranny of false polarities</td>
<td>128</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5 The ethic of responsibility</td>
<td>169</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bibliography</td>
<td>211</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Index</td>
<td>226</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Acknowledgements

This book has been a long time in the making, and along the way I have benefited from the guidance, advice, and friendship of many people. I was first introduced to thinking about the relationship between political theory and International Relations as an undergraduate by R. B. J. Walker, and have continued to learn from him ever since. I suspect that there is a great deal in this book that he would disagree with, but I hope that the result does at least some justice to the inspiration. During my time as a graduate student, Paul Evans consistently tried (and failed) to convince me that there was more to Realism, and to Morgenthau in particular, than my blinkered view allowed. I am happy to acknowledge that, in the end, he was right.

For the past five years, I have been lucky enough to work with a remarkable group of colleagues in the Department of International Politics at Aberystwyth. The Department has supplied both a stimulating and convivial environment, as well as a generous sabbatical provision that greatly facilitated the completion of the project.

Many people have read and commented on different parts of the analysis, in a variety of different forms. I wish to thank in particular Asher Horowitz, Jef Huysmans, Oliver Juttersöök, Keith Krause, Jennifer Mitzen, Ross Rudolph, Anders Tjalve, and Alex Wendt for their comments on many of the individual chapters. Alexandra Gheciu, Lene Hansen, and Vibeke Schou Pedersen were kind enough to read the manuscript in its entirety, and their astute criticisms and insights greatly improved the final product. Randall Germain offered sage advice and great friendship throughout, as he has for so many years. I am also indebted to the editor of Cambridge University Press’s British International Studies Association series, Steve Smith, for his guidance and remarkable support throughout the entire process.
Finally, two individuals Richard Wyn Jones and, particularly, Rita Abrahamsen displayed great fortitude and patience, sharing their time and advice with remarkable generosity. Without their help I doubt that the seemingly endless process of finishing this book would ever actually have come to a conclusion.