Many people helped to bring this work to a successful conclusion and I should not wish their assistance to pass unrecognised. Pride of place must go to the anonymous assessors of several grant-awarding bodies who responded magnificently to repeated claims upon their resources. Without the financial support of the British Academy (Small Grants Research Fund in the Humanities), of the Nuffield Foundation (Social Sciences Small Grants Scheme) and of Birmingham University (Arts Faculty Research Grants Fund and University Field Research and Expeditions Fund), the research for this book could never have been undertaken. That my research proceeded smoothly and with a minimum of time-loss is a tribute to the men and women in charge of the public archives of provincial France. In the Lozère Mademoiselle Hélène Latour and Monsieur Benjamin Bardy acceded unhesitatingly to every importunate request for documents and Monsieur Jean Delmas in the Aveyron, Monsieur Dominique Dupraz in the Ardèche and Monsieur Yves Soulingeas in the Haute-Loire were scarcely less accommodating. The generally welcoming introduction to the more frugal fare of the diocesan record depositories also deserves acknowledgement.

As anyone who has experienced enforced residence in small and seemingly unfriendly towns will testify, the evenings and weekends hang most heavily and I feel a particular debt of gratitude to a number of friends whose hospitality has helped to make the lot of the peripatetic researcher more bearable. The Carrère family did much for my self-confidence (and my French) when I first arrived in Rodez as a postgraduate student in 1971 and the support provided by Bernard and Claude Dausse of Lagarrigue de Druelle goes back to this time as well. At Mende, which might easily pass for the bleakest town in France during the winter months, Madame Vaccero and her husband did much to enliven the dispiriting tedium of the evenings, while Claude and Laurence Petit welcomed me to their flat in Clermont-Ferrand. To the latter couple I owe an unforgettable weekend spent in seasonal pursuit of the amphibious life of the Aubrac plateau.

On the technical side, Sue Offley turned my microscopic handwriting into legible typescript and Béatrice Gilbert and Ceri Crossley of the Birmingham

Final thanks must go to my wife, Carolyn, however, for agreeing to an inequitable division of the burdens of child-raising while this book was being researched and written.
