

Preface and Acknowledgements

This book has had a long gestation period, and as such has 'accumulated' many helpers along the way. It began in 1996-7 as a project within the Department of Urban and Regional Planning at Curtin University of Technology, Perth, Western Australia. We are grateful for the assistance provided then by the Head of School of Architecture and Planning, Prof. Laurie Hegvold.

The project then 'moved' to Israel, to the Department of Geography and Environmental Development, Ben Gurion University of the Negev, Beer-Sheva. It was greatly assisted by the Negev Center for Regional Development within Ben-Gurion University, and the good will, professional advice and financial ingenuity of its Chair, Prof. Yehuda Gradus.

We would also like to extend special thanks to Kluwer Academic Publishers, and especially to Herman van der Wusten and Petra van Steenbergen who displayed great patience and understanding in waiting for our manuscript.

The physical production of the book was skillfully guided by Elana Avni, who copy edited and page-set the text, and by Pieter Louppen who drew many of the maps and Galit Yahya who designed the cover. We very much appreciate their skills.

The authors of the various chapters must be thanked for their original insights, their willingness to work with a fairly firm analytical framework, and for their willing participation in the project. We hope that the long journey on which we took the authors – both temporally and theoretically -- was worth their patience and faith.

Finally, we do hope the book raises as many questions as it answers, and opens as many debates as it settles. This can only help the field, as it encounters the uncertain challenges of the twenty first century.
