Sir Matthew Hale (1609–76) was the greatest common lawyer of his age, and the most universally admired. Although he held office under Oliver Cromwell, this barely affected his standing in Restoration times.

A study of Hale's life and thought necessarily illuminates the central role of the common law in Stuart politics. This book explains Hale's political ideas, and his subtle understanding of the peculiar character of an 'unwritten' law. It also covers his extensive writings on scientific and religious questions, writings which document a shift from puritan to liberal Protestantism. His acute but equivocal response to the science of Descartes and Boyle reveals a fascinating interplay between his 'latitudinarianism' and the new natural philosophy. The result is a unique case study, and a comprehensive portrait of a seventeenth-century mind.

This is a series of monographs and studies covering many aspects of the history of the British Isles between the late fifteenth century and the early eighteenth century. It includes the work of established scholars and pioneering work by a new generation of scholars. It includes both reviews and revisions of major topics and books which open up new historical terrain or which reveal startling new perspectives on familiar subjects. All the volumes set detailed research into our broader perspectives and the books are intended for the use of students as well as of their teachers.

For a list of titles in the series, see end of book.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book has its origins in (and wholly supersedes) a somewhat uneven doctoral dissertation ('Sir Matthew Hale', Cambridge 1991). I am extremely grateful to Richard Tuck, my supervisor; to my examiners, Professor Gerald Aylmer and Mr David Yale; and to the British Academy, which paid for three years of research. Part of the last revision took place in time stolen from other projects during happy short-term fellowships at the John Carter Brown and Folger Shakespeare Libraries. Trinity College, Cambridge has housed, fed, and protected me for the best part of a decade, latterly as a Fellow, elected under Title 'A'. Like many Cambridge graduate students over recent years, I doubt I would have persevered without the consistent kindness of John Morrill. As an unusually disorganised reader, I have benefited greatly from the goodness of the staff in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, the University Library, Cambridge (especially the Rare Books Room), the Public Record Office, Chancery Lane, Lambeth Palace Library, Lincoln's Inn Library, Gloucester Record Office, and the London Library. The then librarian of Lambeth Palace, Dr Geoffrey Bill, made my researches feasible by letting me read the Hale papers in an unbound, uncatalogued state. I owe a special debt to Colin Armstrong for reading the Church Times and telling me this archive had become available. Exasperated readers should exonerate all the above of the responsibility for anything to be found in the following pages which strikes them as dull, or erroneous, or stupid. Things would have been much worse without the criticisms of an anonymous reader, my copy-editor, Mary Richards, and the editors of this series. Inadequacies which remain are nobody's fault but my own.
